He said that were he starving, he would not ask your aid. Though he were an emperor, I would resist him. We should be honest, tho none were to follow. 57. Distinguish between the use of would and should with examples. Compare the answer to Question 45, and in addition state that both words are used to soften expressions of opinion, or of an actual wish, as, I would that--would God that. Also should is used to express a future dependent or a past tense, and when the event is under our control, as, You promised it should be done. If not under our control use would, as, You said it would rain. 58. What...
