Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from A History of Calexico Tens of thousands of years ago, before man inhabited the earth, the Gulf of California extended inland almost I to San Gorgonio Pass. Had Yuma been in existence then, it would have been on the eastern shore of the Gulf, while the mountains east of San Diego would have been on the western shore. The entire Imperial Valley was then under the waters of the Gulf of California. The mighty Colorado River emptied into the Gulf on the eastern side. The Colorado is a powerful stream. Its drainage basin extends from the Gulf of California to the southern edge of Yellowstone National Park, an area of of over 260,000 square miles. Most of this region is mountainous and erosion is rapid. As a result, the Colorado carries in suspension tons and tons of solid matter. Even now this mighty stream carries some 160,000,000 tons of sediment past Yuma every year. For centuries, this mass had been poured into the Gulf from the eastern side. It is little wonder then that it gradually built up a delta, which year by year crept westward until at last it reached the opposite shore. Thus the Gulf acquired its present shore line, while the northern part was entirely cut off, leaving it an inland sea. The River chose the southeastern side of its delta and thus flowed into the Gulf. The inland sea evaporated at the rate of about six feet per year. In the course of time it dried completely, leaving an arid basin which later became known as the Salton Sink. Its deepest portions were covered with a thick crust of salt. How...
